Wrestling

One of the two major sports for men at R I T is collegiate wrestling.

Practice for the sport starts early in October and continues through April. Very few students who come out for wrestling have had any experience before coming to the Institute. Every member of the wrestling squad is expected to abide by the training rules.

Collegiate competition for our varsity team is furnished by teams from Kent State Teachers University, Syracuse University, Buffalo University, Alfred University, and Case School of Applied Science of Cleveland, Ohio, along with other universities and colleges having representation in the college wrestling field in our own vicinity and Canada.

This year's team was made up of Bryce Showalter 121 lb. class, while Edward Wallin and Stuart Crosier fought it out for the 128 lb. class. Robert Lambert and Raymond Zidell wrestled the 136 lb. class and Kenneth Christian the 145 lb. class. Bill Woock and Arnold Smith defended the 155 lb. class and Leo Manning the 165 lb. class. A newcomer to R I T in January, William Cladwell, successfully defended the heavyweight class.

The team wrestled a limited schedule this year because of a late start. However plans are now underway to start practice early in October of next year.

This years matches were: Buffalo U. at Buffalo on February 28; the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Canada on March 7; and Buffalo U. at Rochester on March 21.
