CRIMSON WRESTLING

TO Indiana's 1921 Wrestling team goes the honors of winning the Western title and of giving Penn State, the National Wrestling Champs, a hard-fought meet in a 32-14 Penn State victory. Lead by the indomitable Ted Mumby, Western wrestling champion, and Captain John Moore, the Crimson mat team made itself justly recognized throughout the country as hard men to defeat.

The final match of the year was held in the Men's Gymnasium, March 30. A crowd of more than a thousand persons witnessed the exhibition and saw Ratcliff, the Indiana wrestler in the 125-pound class, defeat Garber, the Eastern Mat Champion. The best match was between Spangler, Eastern champ in the 175-pound class and Mumby, Indiana's "biggest little man." The first two bouts were a draw and the third was won by Spangler on a decision. Throughout the match Mumby was the aggressor, and in the minds of many the third bout was thought to be a draw.

from Illinois, Northwestern, Nebraska, Iowa, Purdue, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Iowa State College and Chicago competed. The final score stood, Indiana 16, Iowa 15; Nebraska 12, Northwestern 11; Ohio State 9, Ames 6; Illinois 5, Oklahoma 5; Purdue 4 and Chicago 0.

Mumby won the Western Championship by defeating Hunter of Iowa on a fall. Stanley, in the 115-pound class and Ratcliff in the 125-pound class, took second places for Indiana and contributed eight points toward the final count.

The wrestling season opened on January 14 in a match with the Indianapolis Y.M.C.A. in the Men's Gymnasium. The score was 32-0 for Indiana. At Ames College, the Crimson was defeated, 38 to 12, but a number of the first-string men were unable to enter which explains for the Crimson defeat. Cincinnati University was easily defeated, 50 to 6, February 5. Northwestern was defeated, 40 to 6 in a match at Evanston, February 11, and a week later, the Boilermaker wrestlers were defeated 36 to 16 at Lafayette. The University acted as host for a meet of the Indiana Amateur Athletic Union, February 24-25, and the best amateur wrestlers in the state were entered. Indiana took first honors by winning four championships, and Gary was second with three championships. A match with Lawrence College at Alleton, Wis., March 4, was a Crimson victory by a score of 22 to 12. Orville Ratcliff, National Champion in the 125-pound weight, captains the Crimson wrestling team for next year. A sophomore in the University and his first year on the varsity, Captain Ratcliff represents the true fighting spirit of Indiana athletes.
