With the Grapplers

R. C. LEONARD
Coach

When the curtain fell on the 1926 wrestling season Penn State's two-year reign as undefeated intercollegiate champions was ended. Handicapped by the ineligibility of several veterans and by the loss of three intercollegiate title-holders, Coach Leonard's squad came through with six victories, losing only to Cornell, and after making a disappointing getaway in the championships held here March twentieth and twenty-first, battled to third place.

Outstanding among the Penn State triumphs were the Blue and White's second win over Navy in as many years and the fourth consecutive victory over Pennsylvania. After opening the season by defeating Alfred University 26-5, the Nittany matmen crushed Pennsylvania 19-6 at Weightman Hall. A sensational victory over Syracuse followed and Nittany followers took heart. Rumbaugh's spectacular win and Garrison's easy fall over their respective opponents clinched the Orange meet 13-13 and put new life in the team while the return of Captain Liggett strengthened the 135-pound division.

Championship aspirations proved premature, however, for Cornell's veteran team eked out a 14-9 decision over the Lions in the Armory, February twentieth. The bright spots in Penn State's defeat were the victories of Wallace Liggett and Kaiser, and Garrison's unexpected win over Captain Affeld who later was crowned intercollegiate heavyweight champion. Undismayed by their first downfall in more than two years of keen competition, the Varsity wrestlers travelled to Annapolis and did what no other team ever accomplished—humbled the Midshipmen for two successive years. Skillful grappling by Kaiser, the Liggetts, Packard and Rumbaugh gave Penn State a 12-10 edge. Flushed by their triumph the Lion grapplers returned to the Armory mats March sixth and in their last dual meet of the year tumbled Ohio University's Conference champions by a 19-3 score.

Although Penn State had been defeated by Cornell, the Lions had shown steady improvement and were counted on to give Lehigh and Cornell a strong fight for first honors in the Intercollegiate. The services of such grapplers as Carey, Black and Parthemore were sadly missed however, and the Blue and White finished third after an unfortunate start that presaged a disastrous conclusion. Fortunately the matmen regained their form and made a brilliant bid to wrest second place honors from Lehigh, failing by only one point. The final count gave Cornell the diadem with 22 points, Lehigh second place with 15, Penn State third with 14 and Yale fourth with 12. Princeton, Pennsylvania, Syracuse and Columbia followed in that order.

For the first time in nine years Penn State failed to place an individual champion. Rumbaugh gained second place after losing to champion Russell of Yale, while Kaiser, Ace, Packard and Garrison secured third places.
