

It certainly was exciting, but how did John pin him?

DAVE MORELAND (bottom) is caught by Stu Smith in a double arm bar.

AN OUTSIDE STANDUP displayed by Jim Lashbrook (front) and Ralph Lynn.

THIS COULD BE an illegal body slam as Paul Kronenwetter tumbles Greg Amidon.

A TRAPPED Frank Miller is the victim of Ralph Lynn's cross-face cradle.

You've just returned from a wrestling match. It sure was exciting!

How about that 175-pound clash? Wasn't that something! John got his opponent in a double leg grapevine hold and boom — that was it — John had himself a pin!

Now then, what in the world is a double leg grapevine hold? How many wrestling fans know the different pinning combinations? There are countless combinations . . .

Mynderse Academy's Blue Devils, who have racked up a 11-0-1 record this season, are accustomed to pinning combinations. That's why the Devils have put the clamps on so much opposition.

With that in mind, The Times also became curious about some of the pinning combinations and with the help of the Mynderse team we show you some of them on this page.

Times photos by George Telarico.

IT'S THE LEG SPLIT being applied to Glenn Prosser by Jim Lashbrook.

THE POPULAR JACOBS hold is being applied to Al Calabro (bottom) by Mike Bullis.

HERE'S THE DOUBLE leg grapevine. Greg Amidon (top) flashes approval after putting the clamps on Paul Kronenwetter.

BROTHERS STEVE AND DAVE HALL mix it up. This time, it's the guillotine.

NATT NOZZOLIO (top) prepares to pin Dave Moreland as Coach Abe Meyers gets set to slap his hand to the mat.

A NEAR FALL as Glenn Prosser (top) gets the best of Mike Bullis.