

Ray, Hanselman capture County wrestling crowns

They cheered loudest and longest when Brighton's Roger Ray upset Irondequoit's Tim Lehmann, 5-4 in overtime, to win the 126-pound title in last night's finals of the Monroe County high school wrestling tournament at Webster Schroeder. That was midway through the program.

Earlier, a 91-pound winner named John Hanselman of East Rochester drew a polite round of applause for his 4-2 victory over Kevin Carney from Gates-Chili. Maybe that's because few in the estimated crowd of 1,000 knew Hanselman's story.

Irondequoit won the team title for a second consecutive year. That was announced. Ray was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player. That was announced. Irondequoit's Tony Cotroneo won his fourth straight county title — and the 139th match, 19 short of the state record — of his brilliant five-year varsity career. That, realistically, was a foregone conclusion.

But the story of 4-foot-11, 91-pound John Hanselman was known to only a few.

He had registered two straight pins during last August's Empire State Games in Syracuse. He was cruising towards a medal, perhaps a gold.

The only metal he got was when two steel plates were inserted to hold together a broken right arm suffered during his third match. Doctors told him he could forget about wrestling this year.

But John Hanselman didn't listen. And last night, wearing a protective cast on his arm, he outmaneuvered Carney, raised his arms in victory and raised his freshman record to 10 victories, two losses.

"This guy's a worker," a proud coach, Don Quinn, said later. "Since he was in the seventh grade he's lived and slept wrestling.

"The doctors told him he wouldn't wrestle this year, but when they removed his cast (after more than 10 weeks), they couldn't believe the strength in his arm."

And they couldn't have begun to measure his desire. From the first day of practice, Hanselman was there. If he was going to become the next Tony Cotroneo, he wasn't going to sit around and watch other people wrestle

And he wasn't at Schroeder last night just to prove he could compete. He was there to prove he was the best.

"I was in there to win the whole smash," Hanselman said. "After last year the coach (Quinn) made me list my goals. This was my goal for this year. Just this."

Ray aroused the crowd when he overcame a 6-0 deficit, tied the score at 7-7 with a takedown with eight seconds left in regulation, then won his 126-pound final against defending champion Lehmann when the Irondequoit wrestler allowed him to escape (one point) with :09 left in overtime. Lehmann was not able to play for a tie because of tie-breaking criteria that favored Ray.

"He started pushing me real hard," Ray said, recalling the reversal and near-fall that gave him five points and cut Lehmann's lead to 6-5. "He was trying to push me over. I just found a weak spot and got him over. Once I got him on his back, my adrenalin started flowing.

"I just came out and decided I was going to go for it," Ray said. "He had everything to lose, and I had nothing to lose."
