Junior Varsity

Wrestling, no doubt the most physically demanding sport in high school athletics, also demands a keen mentality. A boy must be a wrestler in mind as well as body. For those boys pictured here, perhaps the most memorable sound of their high school days was the referee's hand on the mat indicating a pin. They have known the inner satisfaction of seeing their team score raised because of an individual match performance.

Wrestling, besides giving all members of the student body an opportunity to participate, incorporates team play with individual effort. When the whistle blows to begin a match, a boy is on his own—he must rely on his own agility and strength in order to defeat his opponent. This aspect of the sport makes it not only interesting to watch, but also provides a boy with a rewarding sense of accomplishment that is difficult to obtain in other types of competition.

This year's team, under coach Sam Sanders, has several seasoned veterans, led by captain and three times sectional winner, Ray Cross. Other sectional hopefuls include: Sam Crisanti, Tom Carlson, Clark Bartlett, Charles Cornwell, and Roger DePasquale. The team got off to an impressive start by defeating Jamestown and Catauga, and placing second in a Holiday Tournament that included twelve area schools.
